Help for firms committed to cutting carbon emission

ENERGY: A new online service has been launched to help prepare businesses for the Carbon Reduction Commitment (CRC) Energy Efficiency Scheme.

Landmark Information Group has developed the website www.carboncounter.co.uk in partnership with the UK consultancy Enviros.

The resource will help organisations find out whether they are legally obliged to register for CRC from April.

It will also enable them to map energy consumption across each branch of their business using clear on-screen guidance.

David Mole, managing director of Landmark Environment, said: "A fifth of companies have not even started planning or have no idea what measures they need to take.

"Considering the increasing scrutiny being placed on the energy performance of large companies, there is an opportunity for those who take early action to benefit from enhanced reputation, as well as cost savings through greater efficiency."

The service will allow users to compile everything they need for the CRC mandatory Footprint and Annual Reports ready for submission to the Environment Agency.
